

Caitlin Brooks was born and raised in North Carolina. Since becoming a licensed attorney in 2012, her passion has been public safety and serving the State. Prior to staying home with their two young children, she served the State as an attorney in the General Counsel's Office for the Department of Public Safety. Her primary areas were Prisons, Community Corrections, GCC, and Highway Patrol.

Caitlin lives in Apex with her husband, Grant, and their two children. They are active members at Apex Baptist Church, avid supporters of Young Life and die hard Tar Heels. She serves by appointment of the Senate.
